31. Cookies - what is a cookie? A cookie is a small amount of data, which often includes an anonymous unique identifier, that is sent to your browser from a website's computer and stored on your computer's hard drive. Each website can send its own cookie to your browser if your browser's preferences allow it, but (to protect your privacy) your browser only permits a website to access the cookies it has already sent to you, not the cookies sent to you by other sites. Many sites do this whenever a user visits their website in order to track online traffic flows.

32. Cookies record information about your online preferences. Users have the opportunity to set their computers to accept all cookies, to notify them when a cookie is issued or not to receive cookies at anytime. The last of these, of course, means that certain personalised services cannot then be provided to that user and accordingly you may not be able to take full advantage of all of the features on our site. If you wish to turn off our cookies, please type "Cookie" in the index of the "help" facility in your browser, but please note that turning off cookies may limit your use of our website. If you have set your computer to reject cookies you can still browse our site anonymously until such time as you wish to register for our services. For further information on cookies please visit www.aboutcookies.org or www.cookiecentral.com

33. Our website makes use of cookies. Visitors to our websites are sent anonymous cookies to keep track of their browsing patterns and build up a demographic profile. We also use cookies to make it easier for you to use and complete certain facilities on the site (such as the "My Account" section). Any visitor to one of those facilities will be sent a "session" cookie (which lasts only for your visit) that enables you to use the facility. You do not need to allow your browser to accept cookies in order to browse much of our websites or to access many of our services. Most browsers allow you to turn off the cookie function. Computer viruses are not passed through the use of cookies.

34. Security is a priority for us and we realise it is a major issue for people purchasing on the Internet. We understand that you need to know that a website is legitimate and that transactions are secure before you buy. When you place an order with us or access your account information online, this is done through a secure server which encrypts all of the information you input before it is sent to us using a secure socket layer("SSL"). Also you have the added protection provided by Barclay's ePDQ Internet Payment Service.

35. None of our employees or our suppliers ever get to view your confidential card details when entered online. SSL is the industry standard security technology used by Microsoft, Netscape, and leading internet commerce companies - it is one of the most advanced security measures available.

36. By using our online service, you accept any security risks and will not hold us responsible for any breach of security, unless you can prove that this is due to our negligence or wilful default. We are not responsible for Agents or their actions except as authorised by us in writing.
